

Şebnem Kalemli-Özcan

Dr. Şebnem Kalemli-Özcan is the Neil Moskowitz endowed professor of economics at University of Maryland, College Park. She is a research associate at the National Bureau of Economic Research (NBER) and a research fellow at the Center for Economic Policy Research (CEPR). Currently, she is the coeditor of American Economic Journal: Macroeconomics and serves at the editorial board of American Economic Review. She also serves on the economic advisory panels of the New York Federal Reserve and the Bank of International Settlements.

Kalemli-Özcan was the Duisenberg fellow at the European Central Bank in 2008 and held a position as lead economist and advisor for the Middle East and North Africa region at the World Bank from 2010 to 2011. She was the Houblon-Norman fellow of the Bank of England and a Council on Foreign Relations international affairs fellow from 2017 to 2018.

She served as the senior policy advisor and assistant director at the International Monetary Fund from 2019 to 2020. She is the first Turkish social scientist who has received the Marie Curie International Reintegration Grant prize in 2008 for her research on European financial integration.

Her research focuses on capital flows, macroeconomic fluctuations, and the international transmission of the U.S. monetary policy. Currently, she works on the impact of the COVID-19 pandemic on supply chain bottlenecks, business failures, and inflation.