

Agnès Soucat

Agnès Soucat is the director of health and social protection at Agence Française de Développement. Previously, she was the director for health systems governance and financing at the World Health Organization (WHO) in Geneva, Switzerland. Before joining WHO, she was global lead economist at the World Bank and director for human development for the African Development Bank, where she was responsible for health, education, social protection and jobs for Africa, including fifty-four countries in Africa. She has over thirty years of experience in health and poverty reduction, covering more than seventy countries in Africa, Asia and Europe. She is a pioneer of several innovations in health financing, including community-based financing and performance-based financing. She was a main author of the World Development Report “Making Services Work for Poor People” (2004), the Lancet Commission report Global Health 2035: a world converging within a generation” (2011) and the Lancet Commission on Planetary Health: Safeguarding human health in the Anthropocene epoch (2015) and the “The labor market for health workers in Africa: a new look at the crisis” published by the World Bank in 2013. Soucat holds an MD and a Masters in Nutrition from the University of Nancy in France, as well as a MPH and PhD in Health Economics from the Johns Hopkins University.