

Alfredo Corchado

Alfredo Corchado is executive editor correspondent at Puente News Collaborative. He is a journalist and author who covers United States policy in Latin America and the U.S.-Mexico border. He was the Mexico border correspondent for the Dallas Morning News, where he covered issues including migration, Cuba, Mexico's drug cartels, organized crime, and corruption for more than two decades. He previously reported for the Wall Street Journal and the El Paso Herald Post.

Corchado, a native of Mexico, is the author of Homelands: Four Friends, Two Countries, and the Fate of the Great Mexican-American Migration (Bloomsbury Publishing, 2018) and Midnight in Mexico (Penguin Books, 2013).

Corchado has been a visiting fellow at the David Rockefeller Center at Harvard University, a visiting scholar at the Woodrow Wilson Center, a recipient of the Lannan Residency Fellowship, a USMEX fellow at the University of California at San Diego, and a Neiman Fellow at Harvard University. He is the Southwest Borderlands Initiative Professor at Arizona State University's Walter Cronkite School of Journalism and Mass Communication. In 2023, he was inducted into the National Association of Hispanic Journalists Hall of Fame for his three-plus decades covering the border and Mexico. He is also the winner of the Maria Moors Cabot and Elijah Parish Lovejoy Awards for Courage in Journalism.

Corchado earned a BA in journalism at the University of Texas at El Paso.
