

Courtney Subramanian

Courtney Subramanian has covered major news across four continents for BBC News, Los Angeles Times, USA TODAY and TIME magazine. She recently returned to BBC News after serving as a White House correspondent for the Los Angeles Times, where she chronicled President Joe Biden and Vice President Kamala Harris' administration. Before covering the White House for the Los Angeles Times and USA TODAY, Subramanian served as a reporter and editor for BBC News, where she covered the 2016 election and the Trump administration in the Washington bureau as well as Indian Prime Minister Narendra Modi's 2019 re-election in the Delhi bureau. She worked for TIME magazine in the London, Hong Kong and New York bureaus. She earned a bachelor's degree in journalism and history from Miami University and a master's degree at Northwestern University's Medill School of Journalism. Courtney currently serves on the White House Correspondents Association board.