

Oliver Jeffers is an artist, author and activist working across a number of fields using a number of mediums. He grew up in Belfast, Northern Ireland, where he now divides his time with his hometown and Brooklyn. Primarily known for his picture books for children, Jeffers is also an internationally recognized painter, sculptor and speaker whose work, with its simple and accessible beauty, encourages people everywhere of every age to reconsider how to see a world that is radically changing, and, armed with perspective and hope, to reexamine their role in how it will be shaped for future generations.
