

Sandra Lawson

Sandra Lawson is head of client content in BlackRock's global product solutions business, responsible for developing strategic content on investment themes, markets, and client business needs. Previously, Lawson was head of BlackRock's Center for Long-Term Capitalism, a research initiative designed to better understand the ways companies can create lasting value for their shareholders through their relationships with key stakeholders.

Before joining BlackRock, Lawson spent more than twenty years in investment research at Goldman Sachs in Hong Kong, London, and New York. As the executive director of Goldman's public-policy think tank, she led a research agenda focusing on financial regulation, financial stability, and environmental, social, and governance (ESG) issues. Her analysis of the economic impact of women's education underpinned Goldman's '10,000 Women' initiative, which provided business education to female entrepreneurs. She began her career as an intelligence analyst at the Central Intelligence Agency, covering Chinese politics from Washington DC and southern China. Lawson has degrees from Dartmouth College and Yale Law School.