

Matthew Prince

Matthew Prince is cofounder and CEO of Cloudflare. Cloudflare's mission is to help build a better Internet. Today the company runs one of the world's largest networks, which spans more than 330 cities in over 125 countries. Prince is a World Economic Forum Technology Pioneer and winner of the 2011 Tech Fellow Award. Prince holds an MBA from Harvard Business School where he was a George F. Baker scholar and awarded the Dubilier Prize for Entrepreneurship. He earned his JD from the University of Chicago and BA in English literature and computer science from Trinity College. He's also the co-creator of Project Honey Pot, the largest community of webmasters tracking online fraud and abuse.