Nazanin Ash

Nazanin Ash is CEO of Welcome.US, a new national initiative mobilizing Americans and American institutions to help resettle refugees, beginning with our Afghan allies. Most recently, she was vice president for global policy and advocacy at the International Rescue Committee, a global humanitarian organization working in 40 countries overseas and resettling refugees in 26 cities across the United States. Previously, she served as deputy assistant secretary in the Bureau of Near Eastern Affairs at the Department of State, on the policy planning staff of the secretary of state, and as principal advisor and chief of staff to the first director of U.S. foreign assistance and administrator of USAID.