

Nehad Chowdhury

Nehad Chowdhury is a managing director and the global head of sovereign credit management (SCM) at Citigroup. His team is responsible for establishing Citi's internal views on global macroeconomic and sovereign risk and for underwriting Citi's credit exposure to sovereigns. His team's assessments are also used to guide senior management decisions regarding country strategy. He brings over twenty-five years of experience to this function.

Prior to joining Citi in 2013, Chowdhury was an economist at the International Monetary Fund (IMF) and advised IMF's management and policymakers on global financial stability risks. Chowdhury began his career at Goldman Sachs where he held multiple roles in New York and London, including advising governments on capital markets transactions and public finances.

Chowdhury has an MPA in international development from Harvard University and a BA in economics from Haverford College. He has traveled to over eighty countries.
