

Sarah Sewall

EVP, National Innovation Strategy

Dr. Sarah Sewall serves as Executive Vice President, National Innovation Strategy at IQT. She guides IQT's new Compass investing initiative and analysis to inform and strengthen U.S. technology innovation. Dr. Sewall served as an Under Secretary of State from 2014-2017, responsible for issues ranging from counterterrorism to democracy. Dr. Sewall spent a decade teaching national security at the Harvard Kennedy School and directed the Carr Center for Human Rights Policy. She worked closely with the U.S. military to modernize U.S. counterinsurgency doctrine, including leading a comprehensive field study of Afghanistan operations. Dr. Sewall served on the Defense Policy Board under Secretaries Gates and Hagel. During the 1990s, she was the inaugural Deputy Assistant Secretary of Defense for Peacekeeping. She had previously spent six years as Senior Foreign Policy Advisor to Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell.

Dr. Sewall received a doctorate from Oxford University, where she was a Rhodes Scholar.