

Seema Mody

Seema Mody leads global markets coverage for CNBC, focusing on the intersection of foreign policy and Wall Street. In her daily reporting, Mody covers the biggest international stories in the world including China's reopening, export controls, and India's rise as an economic power. As the only U.S. born South Asian correspondent, Mody is a regular anchor of Worldwide Exchange, Squawk on the Street, and Power Lunch. Mody is known for her impactful, news-making interviews with the most influential investors and CEOs including Marc Lasry, Henry Kravis, Indra Nooyi, and Richard Branson. Mody provides in-depth reporting on the health of the consumer and the impact of inflation on sectors like travel, agriculture, and defense. In 2021, Mody launched CNBC's first ever Women and Wealth digital show that spotlights diverse founders and entrepreneurs. Mody regularly appears across NBC, Today Show, and MSNBC with her reporting. Mody's groundbreaking interview with China's foreign vice minister in Beijing on the South China Sea dispute sparked a response from neighboring countries. Mody has landed a string of competitive interviews with foreign leaders including Arun Jaitley, India's finance minister, and South Korea's foreign minister. Most recently, she was coanchor of Worldwide Exchange based in London where she reported extensively on technology and politics across Europe. To this day, Mody continues to oversee U.S.-India relations for the entire global network.

Previously, Mody was an anchor and reporter at CNBC-TV18 in Mumbai, India where she covered the country's economic boom. Mody graduated from the University of Washington with a degree in biological sciences.
