

Dorinda Elliott

Dorinda (Dinda) Elliott is senior vice president and director of programs at the China Institute, which aims to advance a deeper understanding of China through programs in education, culture, art, and business. Before joining China Institute, she worked for three years as editorial and communications director at the Paulson Institute, founded by Hank Paulson, which promotes U.S.-China relations and sustainable growth in both countries. Elliott was previously a correspondent and editor at Newsweek, Conde Nast Traveler, and editor in chief of Asiaweek.

