

Matthew F. Ferraro

Matthew F. Ferraro is counsel at WilmerHale where he practices at the intersection of national security, cybersecurity, and crisis management. He counsels clients, writes, and speaks on the threats that digital disinformation and deepfakes pose to corporations, brands and markets and on the evolving regulatory environment surrounding these issues. Before WilmerHale, Ferraro was a U.S. intelligence officer. During his earlier government career, he held staff, policy, and operational positions at the Office of the director of National Intelligence and the Central Intelligence Agency. In addition to being a term member at CFR, he is a visiting fellow at the National Security Institute at George Mason University where he writes widely on intelligence and national security issues.
