Beth Keck holds joint appointments as the Volkswagen visiting chair in sustainability at Schwarzman College, Tsinghua University in Beijing, China; and as practitioner-in-residence, China studies, at Johns Hopkins University’s School of Advanced International Studies (SAIS) in Washington, DC. She has an extensive background in international business and sustainability with a focus on China, and teaches graduate-level courses and seminars on business sustainability strategy, corporate social responsibility, and public affairs.

Prior to her academic career, Keck was Walmart’s senior director of women’s economic empowerment initiatives, with a focus on training one million women for the workforce and in farming. She also served as Walmart’s senior director for sustainability, where she was responsible for the globalization of the company’s sustainability program, including its landmark sustainable agriculture strategy and responsible sourcing initiatives in China. Before joining Walmart in 2004, Keck was based in China and Hong Kong for the U.S. Federal Aviation Administration and The Boeing Company, respectively.

Keck is a member of the National Committee on U.S.-China Relations and on the board of directors of ACDI/VOCA and Tanager, international development nonprofit organizations operating in Africa, Asia, and Latin America. She has a bachelor's degree in journalism from The University of Missouri School of Journalism, and a master’s degree in Chinese studies from SAIS. She completed one year of post-graduate studies at The Chinese University of Hong Kong as a Rotary ambassadorial scholar.
