

Jove Oliver

Jove Oliver has over twenty years' experience designing and executing results-driven communications, advocacy, and digital campaigns for international organizations, Fortune 500 companies, UN agencies, academia, and government. Specializing in global health, social impact, crisis management, and international policy, he has worked with Amnesty International, Bloomberg Philanthropies, the City of New York, Columbia University, Eli Lilly & Co.'s global health team, Mozilla, the U.S. Department of Energy, the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, Wikipedia, the World Bank Group, and numerous other leading organizations.

Oliver served for six years as the senior advisor to the International Union Against Tuberculosis and Lung Disease and played a leading role in their execution of the World Conference on Tobacco or Health and the Union World Conference on Lung Health. From 2006 to 2010, he was a director at the Clinton Global Initiative (CGI), leading the communications, marketing, and digital departments. Prior to CGI, Oliver worked for the World Health Organization developing social mobilization, behavior change, and communications strategies for projects in more than forty countries.

Oliver's ghostwriting for heads of state, CEOs, and nonprofit leaders has appeared in the New York Times, Washington Post, Los Angeles Times, Wall Street Journal, Guardian (UK), Wired, and other leading outlets, while his own writing has been published in the Atlantic, CNN.com, Hill, New York Daily News, and elsewhere. Oliver has lived and worked in eight countries across Europe, Africa, and Asia and maintains a global network of contacts in media, business, government, and the UN system.