

Rebecca Bill Chavez

Dr. Rebecca Bill Chavez has three decades of foreign policy and national security experience in government and academia. She served as deputy assistant secretary of defense for Western Hemisphere affairs during the Obama-Biden administration. Before that, Chavez was a tenured professor of political science at the United States Naval Academy where she focused on issues of democracy, the rule of law, and international relations. She is currently a nonresident senior fellow at the Inter-American Dialogue and a member of the Foreign Policy for America advisory board, the Leadership Council for Women in National Security steering committee, the Princeton Institute for International and Regional Studies advisory council, and the Council on Foreign Relations, where she chaired the advisory committee for the 2020 Council Special Report The Day After in Venezuela: Delivering Security and Dispensing Justice by CFR Fellow Paul Angelo. Chavez is the author of The Rule of Law in Nascent Democracies: Judicial Politics in Argentina (Stanford University Press). She has testified before Congress, published widely in scholarly journals, and her opinions pieces have been published in an array of outlets including the New York Times. Raised in Austin, Texas, Rebecca received her PhD in political science from Stanford University and her BA in public and international affairs from Princeton University.
