

Will Hurd

Will Hurd is a former U.S. representative from Texas, cybersecurity executive, and undercover officer in the CIA. For almost two decades, he's been involved in the most pressing national security issues.

While in Congress, Texas Monthly and Politico Magazine called Hurd “The Future of the GOP,” because he put good policy over good politics at a time when America was often consumed with what divides us rather than what unites us. He was able to get more legislation signed into law in three terms than most congressmen do in three decades, including a national strategy for artificial intelligence.

Prior to his time in Congress, Hurd helped build a cybersecurity company that prepared businesses for the next domain of conflict—cyberspace.

Hurd is a native of San Antonio and earned a computer science degree from Texas A&M University.
